

3 Twin Sails

Twin Sails sets itself apart from the crowd on Brewers Row with its cutting edge progressive American IPAs, Pale Ales and Stouts.

Twin Sails joined Port Moody's Brewers Row late in 2015, opening right next door to Yellow Dog. The name of the brewery refers to its founders, who are twin brothers, as well as the common sight of sailboats on the waters of the Burrard Inlet out front of the brewery. Originally, a focus on German beers such as hefeweizen, gose and pilsner helped Twin Sails stand out from the crowd, but more recently, the brewery expanded its beer list considerably. Now, it is seen as one of the province's leading producers of innovative, cutting-edge North American IPAs, Pale Ales and Stouts.

4 Yellow Dog

This is the place that started the brewery craze in Port Moody. Who's a good doggie?

The first brewery to open on Murray Street in Port Moody, Yellow Dog solidified its reputation early on when its Shake A Paw Smoked Porter was named 2014 Beer of the Year at the BC Beer Awards. Since then, the brewery has also won silver medals at the Canadian Brewing Awards for its Sit and Stay Belgian ISA and its Go Fetch West Coast Hoppy Saison (yes, all the beer names have dog themes). The brewery has a tasting room and growler station up front with a big picnic area behind the brewery.

What's an Ale Trail?

A BC Ale Trail is a self-guided tour highlighting local craft brewery destinations and the super, natural landscapes that surround them.

Within each Ale Trail you will find recommended itineraries to explore the respective destination – this includes an array of craft breweries, pubs, restaurants, cafes, outdoor activities, sightseeing, accommodations and more.

Ale Trail itineraries are not gospel; we recommend you venture off the grid and explore points of interest whenever you choose to visit.

ALWAYS DRINK RESPONSIBLY

Members of the BC Ale Trail are committed to ensuring their beers are promoted and enjoyed responsibly, by those adults who choose to consume them, for the continued prosperity of the craft beer industry in British Columbia.

No one should drink alcohol, even in moderation, before operating a motor vehicle or engaging in other activities that involve attention and skill or physical risk.

Back in 2014 it seemed like a quirky twist of fate when two breweries opened on the same street in a supposedly sleepy suburb. When a third brewery joined the original duo on Murray Street, folks began to take notice. Now with four unique operations on "Brewers Row," beer lovers agree that Port Moody is anything but sleepy—it's a destination.

1 Moody Ales

As the westernmost brewery on the beer relay known as Brewers Row, Moody Ales represents either the starting block or the finish line.

Founded by homebrewers Adam Crandall and Dan Helmer, Moody Ales prides itself on its large, welcoming tasting room and its award-winning beers. In the spirit of its homebrewing roots, the brewery features weekly experimental casks and small batches. Don't expect amateurish brews, though. Their flagship beers (including the Vienna Lager which won second place for International Lager at the 2016 BC Beer Awards) are some of the best in British Columbia. Make sure to check out their patio—located on the quiet end of the street, it's the perfect spot to enjoy their well-crafted beers.

2 Parkside Brewery

The most recent addition to Brewers Row welcomes beer lovers in its spacious tasting room facing Rocky Point Park.

Vern Lambourne spent years working at Granville Island Brewing, one of BC's original microbreweries, which dates back to 1984. After Molson-Coors bought GIB in 2008, the Vancouver brewery lost its independent status — but Vern kept on making great beer at the original brewhouse on Granville Island and most people still considered it "craft beer" because he was so well respected in the industry. When Vern announced he was opening this brewery in Port Moody, where he lives, a veritable cheer went up in the craft beer community. Parkside is the newest of the bunch on Brewers Row, with a central location and a beautiful, welcoming tasting room.
